MEETING SUMMARY ✨

Meeting Purpose

Discuss pricing and partnership model between Aleph and CounselFi for scalable financial services.

Key Takeaways

- Aleph offers tiered pricing: ~$30/mo for bookkeeping clients, higher for strategic finance services
- CounselFi sees value in starting clients with basic integration, then upselling more advanced features
- Aleph to provide detailed pricing spreadsheet and mock implementation plan by end of day
- Both parties align on the potential for mutually beneficial, scalable partnership

Topics

CounselFi's Business Model and Needs

- 40-50 client business, aiming for rapid growth over next 3 years
- Offers tiered services: bookkeeping, strategic finance, and a middle tier
- Seeks tools to elevate FP&A capabilities and complement existing stack (e.g., Keeper)

- Values Aleph's quick QuickBooks integration and out-of-the-box financial analysis

Aleph's Tiered Pricing Structure

- Standard pricing: $35,000-$45,000 ACV for direct customers
- Partner pricing: Up to 90% discount with scale commitment
- Bookkeeping tier: ~$30/month per client
- Strategic finance tier: Higher pricing, closer to previously quoted $4,000/year
- Pricing based on service complexity, integrations, and support needs

Partnership Value Proposition

- Aleph provides scalable templates for consistent client onboarding
- Offers data checks, AI-assisted journal entries, and benchmarking capabilities
- Enables CounselFi to easily upsell clients from basic to advanced services
- Positions CounselFi as a de facto sales channel for Aleph, with mutual benefits

Implementation Strategy

- Aleph to provide mock implementation plan
- Aim to onboard all 45 CounselFi clients within 3-6 months
- First month focused on building scalable templates with CounselFi
- Goal: 15-minute client setup from QuickBooks connection to full population

Next Steps

- Aleph to send detailed pricing spreadsheet to CounselFi by end of day
- Aleph to create and share mock implementation plan
- CounselFi to review materials and discuss internally with Tamara
- Follow-up meeting to be scheduled after CounselFi's internal review
